The Science of Perception

Perception is the process by which we interpret the world around us. Our senses receive information from the environment, and our brain processes this information to create a coherent picture of reality. However, our perception is not always accurate. Our brains are constantly filling in gaps and making assumptions, and our expectations and beliefs can influence what we see and hear.

In The Mind's Eye, Dr. Smith explores the science of perception, revealing the tricks that our brains play on us. She discusses the role of attention, memory, and emotion in shaping our perception, and she shows how we can use our understanding of perception to improve our decision-making and create a more fulfilling life.

She discusses the use of altered states of consciousness for personal growth, spiritual development, and healing. She also cautions about the potential risks of altered states of consciousness and provides practical advice on how to use them safely and effectively.
